

Collaborative Engineering Statement

ATsys Adaptive Resilience Engine (ARE) is developed through a collaborative engineering methodology that combines human engineering leadership with artificial intelligence as a technical design assistant.

The project's vision, objectives, engineering decisions, and overall direction are established by its founder and engineering leadership.

Artificial intelligence is employed to support system architecture, software design, technical documentation, engineering analysis, and iterative development.

Engineering responsibility and project governance remain under human leadership throughout the project's evolution.